There are lots of movies that have got some good soundtracks that ended up becoming quite popular in the world.

Which movie have you seen in the past 20 years that got the soundtrack that you liked a lot? Was the movie that interesting as the soundtrack or you just liked the soundtrack?

I really like the soundtrack for Tron: Ares.

Trent Reznor was a perfect choice for this movie, in my opinion.

Seems like most soundtracks are pretty boring except for one of two songs. They're meant to set the tone of a movie, and some sonic backgrounds are less exciting than others. But I think the soundtrack of Tron: Ares is pretty good, all the way through.

I know this is an older movie, but the best soundtrack that I've liked from a movie is that of a movie called The Good, the Bad and the Ugly.

The movie was done in 1966 (you can try checking the movie out), but that soundtrack from that movie has remained iconic. I mean I've not even seen any recent movie that got a soundtrack that beats what I heard from that movie.
