Subject: What has been your experience on Bose SoundLink Max?
Posted by George on Sat, 28 Mar 2026 05:25:42 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

My biggest worry with getting any Bose SoundLink Max speaker has always been that of the battery life. I don't like that situation where a device that I turned off when it is fully charged ends up having a drop in battery per cent when I power it on.

I would want to know if anyone have used any of their latest models and whether they have rectified the issue with it? I am planning to get one from the company because I like how loud their speakers sound when in use.

Subject: Re: What has been your experience on Bose SoundLink Max?
Posted by Clint on Fri, 08 May 2026 04:59:59 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I totally feel your worry about Bose Soundlink models. It is not fun when one realizes that a speaker that they left fully charged has dropped some battery percentage when they needed to use it.

It was because of that reason that made me stop using the Soundlink Revolve+ in my studio in 2023. I can't deal with the battery issues because what I do is serious business.

Charles, my friend recently bought the Soundlink Flex 2 few weeks ago and have said that such issues with the battery is no longer there, but I've not got spare money to spend on a speaker right now. I will wait to see if he uses it for at least six months before I draw my conclusion, too.

Aside from the battery drain, I commend the sound quality of Bose Soundlink speakers. So, if it's the battery drain, that is your major concern. There is nothing wrong with giving them a trial first.

Subject: Re: What has been your experience on Bose SoundLink Max?
Posted by George on Fri, 15 May 2026 05:29:13 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Clint wrote on Thu, 07 May 2026 23:59I totally feel your worry about Bose Soundlink models. It is not fun when one realizes that a speaker that they left fully charged has dropped some battery percentage when they needed to use it.

It was because of that reason that made me stop using the Soundlink Revolve+ in my studio in 2023. I can't deal with the battery issues because what I do is serious business.

Charles, my friend recently bought the Soundlink Flex 2 few weeks ago and have said that such issues with the battery is no longer there, but I've not got spare money to spend on a speaker right now. I will wait to see if he uses it for at least six months before I draw my conclusion, too.

Aside from the battery drain, I commend the sound quality of Bose Soundlink speakers. So, if it's the battery drain, that is your major concern. There is nothing wrong with giving them a trial first. Thanks for your contribution. I have always admired the sound quality of their products, but my worry has always been the battery life. You said your friend got the Flex 2 some weeks ago. Would you care if you asked him again how good the speaker has been since then?
