Say where has VTV gone? The last issue looks to be back around the summer.Wayne; I never pictured you for a Scotch drinker. Is that true?

No, I haven't drank in a long time. I'm a teetotaler and have been for 15 years. But I do remember... I saw your post about VTV yesterday and assumed Eric or Charlie would respond, so I didn't. But in an E-Mail a couple days ago, Charlie mentioned that there is another VTV issue coming soon.

So; thats who does that song! Hypnotizing chicken's; can't beat it with a stick. On Mott St. across from Wu Hopps there used to be a little amusement area and outside the large garage opening there was a big red sign that said, "World Famous Dancing Chicken!!", Inside for 25c there was a chicken in a glass box; when you placed a quarter in the slot a trap door would open and the chicken would walk out to get some feed and zap! he would get a little shock that would cause him to jitter his feet like he was dancing. I must have put 50$ in that box over the years. Yes; it was different chickens. Why 20 years; is that an anniversary? Out of all things I miss; that is the one, a good bottle of single malt.

I like the story by Ch. Bukowski where he saw the man in an amusement-park wearing red clothes in a cage, with a "Devil" sign... When he saw Bukowski, he cried and yelled : "My son, get me outta here!" The rest of the story is a funny fantastic/ironic/alcoholic mess...

Man; that is funny! What's the name of that story? What did you think of the movie? With Mickey Rourke? I thought the scene when the two cops come in the door for the third time and he says "What are you guys on duty 24 hrs a day?" was pretty funny. And Fay Dunaway asks him if he hates people and he says "I don't hate people; I just seem to feel better when they're not around." They caught the bar scene pretty good. Ever wake up under a pool table?

IMO - the movie is "so-so", I like his short stories, for example books: "Hot Water Music", "Notes of a Dirty Old Man", "Tales of Ordinary Madness", ... This story "The Devil Was Hot" is from the "South of No North" book... Didn't read it for the long time, but when I turned the leaves of those books again... smile...

Neither do I - only one song I can remember, about like this: "I have the bluebird in my heart who wants to get out/ but I`m pouring whiskey on him and inhale the cigarete smoke..."
