The crossover in the picture that's linked below is from a mainstream speaker. Anybody care to guess how much that speaker's retail price might be based on the quality of the crossover parts?

They look like decent generics. I see polypropylene caps, probably metalized rather than film. A laminated iron core woofer coil and an air core coil for the mid or tweeter. At least there are no electrolytics! I used to see those pretty regularly, believe it or not.
