Subject: Lycra Horns
Posted by Cuppa Joe on Wed, 11 Apr 2007 03:44:10 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I was perusing the Speakerplans website and happened across a thread in the New Projects forum in which a midrange horn was fashioned from Lycra.The fabric was affixed to a wood frame to form the mouth, then a wood disk (from the throat cutout) was centered on the fabric and pulled from behind to stretch it into a horn. The frame shape and some strategic stitching gave the desired flare. The Lycra was then coated on both sides with layers of resin and fiberglass. Once dry, the throat was adhesed to the frame and the excess material was cut away. The added bonus is that your horn can be any color you wish. Very clever!

Subject: Re: Lycra Horns
Posted by blake on Thu, 12 Apr 2007 04:00:21 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Do you happen to remember which thread that was? I briefly looked at the 'new projects' forum, but didn't have time to open every thread on all 32 pages I couldn't get the search function to work either.ThanksBlake

Subject: Re: Lycra Horns
Posted by randle on Thu, 12 Apr 2007 23:09:22 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Ok wow so you know I have to throw in that wonderful question that no one else might even think about asking,lol. What color did you choos your horn to be?

Subject: Re: Lycra Horns
Posted by Cuppa Joe on Fri, 13 Apr 2007 03:13:54 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

The thread is entitled "project firewood tops (aka "terror tops")" and it's almost halfway down the first page.I haven't made any such horns, but I'd be partial to purple!

Subject: Re: Lycra Horns
Posted by blake on Fri, 13 Apr 2007 05:29:25 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Thanks!