Hello Bill, I don't check out the Line array discussion often enough. You had a pic someplace on here for a line array hybrid. Is that going to be in an _audioXpress_ any time soon? I noticed in a posted pic you were using those Pioneer4 inchers. Those are now about half price at $.49 eachand I am thinking on splurging for about 8 of them. But they will be just be clutter if I don't have a good usefor them. Will the design be available from your website?Thanks and I hope you are well. lon@athenet.net

The article is at the publisher, so it will be out within a few months, after which it will go on my site. I used 8 drivers per side at 4 ohms; if you want to stay at 8 ohms go either 9 or 16 drivers per box. I wouldn't go less than 8 drivers per box. It does need to crossover to tweeters at 6kHz, so stock up on some of those closeout Onkyos too, at a 1.5 to 1 ratio with the woofers. I'm using my arrays along with a Tuba 18 sub, crossed at 80 Hz; the Tuba 18 will actually appear before the line array does.

Do you use the 70 cent Onkyos or the 40 cent ones?I got my 16 Pioneers so far, striking while the fire is hot, so to speak. Shipping was more than the merchandise. Some specials they just run for a week, so I figuredI should get the order in today.

I used the ones with the coax mounting post; I chopped the posts off on a bandsaw. Get a dozen per box to match with 8 woofers per box.
