Right now I have a 2006 land rover and I added speakers to my car. I added a subwoofer and I wired it to a JVC head unit. I got the fronts re wired as well like I was suppose to but my system sounds muffled in a way. What did I do wrong?

Does that system involve a crossover? If it's not connected properly, I think that might explain why the highs are lacking.It's just a thought.

I suggest to use a good quality of speakers and subwoofers. Cheap speakers sometimes make the sound quality and reception less than ideal.

I'm not sure thats what my brother said. He was suppose to look at it to see because with me messing with it I might make it worse.

Randle did you ever check out your speakers and find out what happened?
