If you think it's cool looking, like the nostalgia, then keep it. If not, eBay it. You probably won't get more than twenty-five to fifty bucks for it though. The fun of them is the nostalgia.

I think that it is all based on your personal preference if you think that it is stylish then what the heck. I'm sure you probably won't be the only one who feels that way.

I've got a bunch of these old radios. The TransOceanics are pretty valuable but the rest of them wouldn't sell for more than fifty buch each, probably. I don't care - I always rebuild them and get a whole set of new tubes for them, to make sure I can keep them working for years to come. I probably spent more money than they're worth on them, but I wouldn't sell them anyway.My Radio Page

If it works, try selling it on ebay. You can also sell it there if it doesn't work, just label it as a fixer up or for parts.Crystal
