I have a pair of Coral BX-1500 Speakers. They are 150 watt, 6-way/7-speaker monsters with 15" Woofer and seperate (optional) input for treble, mid, and bass. Feq range claimed is 25-25000 and I believe tham. The Problem: one of the cones has been vandalized by a crazed ex-son-in-law. Cone is ripped on a 6-1/2" Low Middler (800-5kHz).I'm looking for any input or suggestions re how I might go about replacing or restoring the speaker. I'm pretty sure Coral no longer exists--maybe bought out by ?????I bought the set in Japan in 1970. They were the absolute best at the time and have held up over the years.

Hi! Would you be interested in parting these out. I've got a pair of these - but I'm missing the woofers, horns, and small tweeters in front. Thanks!! Jack

Although I suppose it could come to that, I'd really rather replace/repair the on "middler" that is torn. DO you know where I could get one? Would you considder parting with one?

i have had a pair somebody gave me for free, i recently hooked them up after having them for 2 years, and was completely amazed. i love them and will never go back to some modern brands. the sound quality is far better than anything modern period.
