Does anyone have any feedback on old coral speakers ---like the BX series---I saw some on e-bay and (forgot about them and they got away) that were 3-ways and 100db rated!---now I am wondering which cabines/models to shop for ---looking for those neat looking FRD models ---but all i have seen so far are 2 or 3 waysvery interesting! Jim

You can sometimes find the same drivers labelled as Calrads. I saw some on Ebay last night.

I have a set Coral BX-1200 speakers and they sound excellent they are rated at 100 watts max music power. I have them running on my sherwood Dynaquad. The speakers are equipped with a four stage crossover on the back with settings ranging from sharp to soft. The are a five way speaker system equipped with six speakers. I would highly recommend them to anyone. I also have another set of corals I believe they are older... I think they are A10 models. This set has two 10" or 12" speakers in the cabinet I can't remember which. They sound excellent I am running them on my marantz. I highly recommend Corals for that nice hi-fi sound.

I just got a pair of Coral bx multi 1000's off ebay. Want to run them with my Sherwood 5000 II, haven't received them yet. Have you heard the 1000's? How would you describe your pair's sound? Thanks. This was the ad for the speaker's I bought..Coral Audio Corporation BX - Multi 10003 - way 4 - Speaker System Vintage The speakers are 50 Watts, 8 Ohms impedance, 35 - 25.000 frequency response. Woofer - 10" 35 - 2.5Hz Midler - 6 1/2" 800 - 9Hz Tweeter - Super tweeters x 2 7K - 25Hz (4 speakers - 3 way) Each speaker can be turned off and on. The level control can turn mid-range and high-range.

Pretty clean and beefy....I've got them set up on the floor facing out into a large room with 28 foot ceilings. I also have Sony computer speakers to split the sound and dampen the reverberation of the room. I feel these speakers have a crisp response without being overpowering...I'm pleased.

I am assuming this is essentially a US based forum and therefore feel relatively safe to mention speakers spotted on ebay for sale in the UK. These are Coral BX1500 vintage speakers. Are these as good as claimed and can anybody give a idea of their market price? They are slightly damaged but look good. Also i would appreciate it if somebody could tell me if Goodmans Audiom 60 bass 12" is a quality speaker? I have been offered some. cheers Bob

I HAVE A PAIR OF CORAL BX-1500 SPEAKERS. I CAN EASILY TELL YOU THAT THE SPEAKERS SOUND GREAT AND HAVE GREAT CLARITY. I HAVE THEM HOOKED UP TO A MARANTZ MODEL 2250 B AMPLIFIER AND BELIEVE ME, I NEED TO BUY A MORE POWERFUL AMPLIFIER SINCE THESE SPEAKERS TAKE THE PUNCH.
