

---

Subject: Which receiver should I invest in?

Posted by Joel Hailey on Sat, 30 Jun 2007 19:06:38 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

I have a Fisher 500-T that I picked up at a second hand store. Cosmetically it is very nice, but the power fuse blows when the unit is plugged in. Obviously it needs some repair. I also have a Harman Kardon HK 450. I am currently using this receiver, but it really needs going through, as the switches and pots are dirty. If I were going to pick one of these units to put some money into, which should I choose? What I like to listen to is all over the map, but does not include hard rock, metal or rap. Thanks in advance for any advice!

---

---

Subject: Re: Which receiver should I invest in?

Posted by MWG on Sat, 30 Jun 2007 21:55:28 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

A 500T was part of the first setup I owned back in 1966. I liked it until I was bitten by the 3 year warranty Mac offered. All that said I'd put the money into the HK. I think it's a better machine. IIRC the 500T has around 28 WPC and the HK has more than that.

---