Subject: spilled beer on amp
Posted by jfutty on Mon, 31 Dec 2007 00:45:43 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

At show I was playing ,my bass player spilled a beer on my Marshal JCM 2000 .It doesn't seem to be working right . What should I do ?

Subject: Re: spilled beer on amp
Posted by Shane on Mon, 31 Dec 2007 03:05:32 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I recommend taking it to a tech to have it checked.We once spilled a beer on our 64 channel board. Took the covers off and let it dry out for a week, turned it on and it worked except for having to clean some of the sliders. We were very lucky.

Subject: Re: spilled beer on amp
Posted by darryl on Tue, 01 Jan 2008 00:16:50 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I had a bass player just like that.

Subject: Audio round table
Posted by helen2008 on Fri, 23 May 2008 07:45:35 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

This website is very useful to learn more things, thankyou======helenIt's no secret that Fender makes great guitar amps, but which one is the best? We think it's the Blues Junior. Find out why.
http://fenderbluesjunioramps.com
http://fenderbluesjunioramps.com

Subject: Re: spilled beer on amp
Posted by chris on Thu, 03 Jul 2008 07:17:40 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

nothin u reall can do usually this electrical components of the amp get ruined when there wet you could either take a blow dryer and try to dry it out completley or u could just get a new head i mean what im sayin isnt somethin u should jump at automatically but from my own personal experience i lost two amps that way and like i said the electrical components in the amp usually get ruined when they get soaked

---