I was invited for a preview. Best of luck with your new forum. This looks very promising. W. Mark Hellinger

Hi Mark! Good seeing you here! Your X Series drivers look great. And I love your description on the CX parts. What a hoot!! I'm anxious to hear an X-1526 and X-1841 sometime. Probably should hear the CX Series "hole filler" parts too. Wayne

Your PM message about the BrandX drivers takes me back. Liz and I dug out some of the old stickers and swag from those days gone by. Where do the years go? Poof... gone!

Is Brand-X still around?

It's a long story. We're Audiophile again: www.audiophile.net/ can explain further if you want, but hopefully it will suffice to say: "It's a long story"?

Um... no. I should probably go. Generally I only make it out for Spring Namm. Tending the "store" and running sound keeps Liz and I pretty busy (we took Christmas morning "off").

Hi Mark, Bill Fitzmaurice made mention of your speakers on his forum, and it got me thinking. I was wondering, do your speakers incorporate a shorting ring in the magnets? The price is excellent. Seems like at that price, it would be a good deal if they had compatible electro-mechanical T/S specs, even if they don't have a shorting ring. But if they do include flux stabilization, that would make them even more attractive. Wayne

Yes, I saw the Bill Fitzmaurice forum discussion concerning my speakers. It seems like the folks that have experience with my product are supportive.No, my speakers don't have shorting rings in the magnets. They're a pretty basic driver and not very sophisticated.
