
Subject: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by Manualblock on Sat, 27 May 2006 00:54:27 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I am noticing more and more the encroachment of the high end into DIY territory. Funny because the whole DIY thing started as a backlash to the high end shenanigans. Pomposity/insane pricing/out of touch with the mainstream, no dedication to the sound or the music; just the fetishistic worship of mega-price totems. Remember when no one could enter any audio salons without bowing on one knee to the audio god installed within. The lost circulation of the magazines. Now I see what appears to be a sudden interest on the net with a new paradigm resembling the old High End aristocracy of pontification and pomposity. Soon there will be a fat guy sitting on a throne offering edicts determining who is worthy of the best lists. The wheel turns. In the end after the disenchantment sets in again the humble DIY'ers and Vintage guys will rise like the phoenix to re-take the audio arena, but until then I guess we must suffer the resurgence of the "High End".

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by MWG on Sat, 27 May 2006 02:30:21 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I think a lot of it has to do with the availability of disposable income. There has been a dramatic increase (except for mine) in the last few years. Look at all the bling bling crap that's for sale. Stuff that does nothing but look flashy. I think there is a line of departure between a DIY home built amp that works well and a boutique amp with flashy plating and or wood panels that produces the same quality as the DIY at 12 X the price. I'm not knocking nice looking VS utilitarian. I do think that there are too many folks investing way too much ego into audio. Audio equipment is for the playing of music. Not to sit and worship the equipment

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by Manualblock on Sat, 27 May 2006 12:02:02 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I know; what kills me is the whole audio thing goes through this every ten years or so. They get all hot over glossy photos and phony reviews then they get bored or broke and the cycle starts all over. But on the bright side; people becoming wise to the hype is what started the whole SE/Horn speaker revival. So we ride this out and wait for the return of sanity and the good things that comes with it.

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by Wayne Parham on Sat, 27 May 2006 14:02:12 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Not to sound too cynical but the whole audio industry seems troubled to me. I've always thought it was because of the nature of the science being fairly low-tech compared to other fields. Brings with it a lot of charlatans and snake oil. Easy enough to deal with though - Just ignore them, trust your own research and judgement.

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by Manualblock on Sat, 27 May 2006 14:24:59 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

True enough; but there is always, when you deal with human perception the intangibles. Like a soup; good ingredients and a good recipe; combine and stir. One person follows the pattern and another is a great chef; same ingredients same recipe. So what is the difference? (Other than one gets paid a whole lot of money and fame and the other just eats lunch.)Thats the border where what we know as science in the present intersects with what we have yet to discover. I call it intuition; some call it religion.As you said; science is just another way of percieving the world.Trust your own judgement; thats the ticket!

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by MWG on Sat, 27 May 2006 14:26:54 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I at first thought the revival of interest in vintage equipment was a really good thing. Now it seems that the my collection is bigger than yours guys are taking over the field. So the folks who actually want to use the equipment are being priced out of the market for the second time I saw a nice Yamaha M-80 amp on CL but it was nearly 400.00. Inflated prices may hit a wall one of these days and level out. Probably be like gasoline though and hit a plateau and stay there I did pick up a nice Sony cd changer for the museum yesterday. It's nowhere near TOTL but works & sounds good and if I tape over all the buttons but the play and volume on the remote the old folks can work it

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by Manualblock on Sat, 27 May 2006 16:37:20 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

You hit the nail on the head. I used to go to guys houses who had upwards of fifty pieces of audio gear and it just sat there collecting dust. Same with guitars; how many good kids would give their eye-teeth to play a 56 strat? Some dim-wit has dozens of them stashed in his basement so his wife can sell it when he kicks the bucket. Records too; I play every album I have and I tell people up front they have no business hoarding music like some obsessive-compulsive dweeb. Collecting is a disease; people can't perform in life so they hoard stuff. And is it my imagination or do they all have the same personal affect? That sort of rushed intensity and superior front with a guarded insecurity?

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena
Posted by Damir on Sat, 27 May 2006 20:02:39 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I talked to my friend a two days ago about not-so nice aspects of this hobby and these forums, and he said "what did you expect of those audiophiles? I'd stay away pretty far from all those ...philes!"
<http://www.plyrics.com/lyrics/buzzcocks/boredom.html>

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena
Posted by Manualblock on Sat, 27 May 2006 21:42:58 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Yeah but it happens in every pursuit. Although the huys who build motorcycles or play golf seem a little more comfortable in their hobbies. And the guys who race three masted schooners around the world; they seem pretty damned content.

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena
Posted by MWG on Sat, 27 May 2006 23:05:38 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

If I had the money to race three masted schooners or even a brig I'd be pretty damned content with myself too

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by Manualblock on Sun, 28 May 2006 00:58:39 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Thats my point! But it also speaks to a larger issue. I think the audio community has an inferiority complex. I believe this stems from one; the isolation, no one else gives a hoot about expensive gear and two from the sheer obsessiveness that informs the whole purpose of persueing something that even the players admitt is impossible to achieve and never will hold a candle to live music played by dedicated artists.We are voyeurs in the world of music and there is a touch of ambiquity and anxiety involved in the process. So consequently there is no feedback from the community at large.In the past there was because of a uniformity of musical works and the shared means to hear them. Now it seems pedagogically extreme to fetishize upon stuff that the rest of the world holds no signifigance attached to it.

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by Wayne Parham on Mon, 29 May 2006 03:41:34 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I agree!

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by Manualblock on Mon, 29 May 2006 12:55:36 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Don't go getting to obtuse on me now!

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by MWG on Mon, 29 May 2006 14:02:29 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Nothing worse than trying to compute the cosine of an obtuse triangle

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena

Posted by Manualblock on Mon, 29 May 2006 15:42:07 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Yes; I find it unnerving. Of course it has never come up as of yet, but you never know.

Subject: Re: Intersting Phenomena
Posted by harry4265 on Sat, 15 Jul 2006 07:54:45 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

thats a bit off task dont ya think!
