Subject: How do you spell Formica?
Posted by wunhuanglo on Sun, 25 Jul 2004 14:14:44 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

The glossy finish, Louis says, consists of decorative 0.028 inch (0.7 mm) surface papers, impregnated with melamine resins, bonded under heat and impregnated with phenolic resins. Louis applies the laminate with polyvinyl acetate (PVA), clamps and cauls, assuring a tight bond with no air pockets. The process takes longer than simple veneers, he says, but the results are far better. After the panels are pressed, they are trimmed, chamfered and edged. "What's great about the laminate," Louis says, "is it's a low-cost way of getting a high gloss finish with beautiful patterns not found elsewhere. It is very easy to maintain, very durable and does not fade."
http://www.enjoythemusic.com/magazine/equipment/1002/omegats1.htm

Subject: Re: Be warned that.....
Posted by BillEpstein on Sun, 25 Jul 2004 17:25:27 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

....you must use a thick towel or trivet when setting a hot frying pan on it.

Subject: Re: Be warned that.....
Posted by lon on Mon, 26 Jul 2004 01:41:41 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I read this post and the word nonsequitor comes to mind.