^^^ so theres my mate infront of a stack^^^ ,4 high of these speakers ive never heard of "dynacord" !We were listening to some drum n bassnow, the BASS part,that isnt a misnomer i tell you!from the entrance of the place, about 45m from the stage, the levels were about what i get with my jbl!!! ,, we went in, humidity rose, temperatures soared,standing room only, redbull+vodka for me.. 6$ for seemingly redbull + tiny amount of vodka :Palready had 5 at home :-Pand stood infront of these speakers while dancing like a monkey!the best part was- also-the soundguy had eqd up the bass, the lows, when a techno-vocalish band came on, the guy struck some continous organ notes,my entire body SHOOK! seriously, these things were reaching ~40-45hz without much distortion! i had alot of airmovement from them ,was great! and the highs didnt even hurt my head!We went downstairs about 4am and the CELESTION speakers hurt my eardrums in a matter of minutes, they were selling earplugs for 1$ out the front! the drums snare constantly attacked my ears :(Good night out,glad i could have the night off work!now only if they had a stack of 4labhorns...:) people wouldnt be able to stand infront of THEM muahahahahah

Being an old fart, I've never understood why they have to be SO DAMN LOUD? WHAT? WHY ARE THEY SO DAMN LOUD? WHAT?I guess if you have enough Red bull and vodka (or Budweiser and vodka, or Wild Turkey and Budweiser) in you, there's no such thing as too loud.

Ever listened to the average conversation in your local pub? Thats why they are so loud.

I guess we have different experiences. I've been in places where SPLs are just insane, enough to mask a jet engine winding up, never mind a 100 drunks.

You are correct but actually I meant the speakers are so loud so as to drown out the inane drunken drivel that passes for conversation in the pubs I hang out in!
