Today I received PT from Netherlands ("ae-europe.nl"), heavy 300VA "monster" with multiple windings and its hood. But, I received their standard "Centurion" model (see "TriodeDick.nl" pages), with 2*380V HV windings instead of 2*500V I ordered...huh, I like this sport. The choke I ordered (10H/250mA) is taller, but I received two, one free of charge?! And the price is VERY reasonable!All in all, I`m not dissatisfied, I`ll build this neverending 300B project one way or another...:-)

Damir; those units look great; but how do they explain mixing up your order that way?

I don`t know, I didn`t ask, anyhow E-mail comunication is slow and "economical", and their vacation is from 07/18-08/08, and they are almost 2000km away - what can I do?I`m pretty sure that I didn`t receive someone elses package - I got some other specific small things I also ordered (Ag wire, teflon isolated wire, condenser clamp).They don`t have good-organized web page (products & prices) and E-mail communication, they are slow - probably problems of the rel. small company with audio stuff not their priority - IMO.But, they have good-quality transformers and good prices.

Well; we can't argue with the quality, they sure look good and well built. And if I had paid attention in Math Class I would be able to do the currency conversion and then I would know how much they cost in dollars.

Thanks D; now I see that is a very good price. So now what will you build with them?

Forgot, apart from 760Vct/0,3A, PT has two 5V/1,5A windings (300B filaments), one 6,3Vct/2A (driver heaters), two 5Vct/3A windings (for rectifiers) and I get one 14V/1A winding I didn`t ask for, that`s the problem now:-).Stereo SE 300B amp, now I have all the parts and probably I`ll start building it...just to solve new PS "problem", then breadbording and actual completing on/in 2HE rack case (pretty small)...
