Subject: Seduced by the Dark Side
Posted by PakProtector on Sun, 26 Mar 2006 01:27:59 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

hey-Hey!!!,Somebody talked me into a SE 45 project...does that count? or for full conversion and awarding myself a Darth ____ name must I apply some of my own funds?cheers,Douglas

Subject: Re: Seduced by the Dark Side
Posted by Norris Wilson on Sun, 26 Mar 2006 02:51:45 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Douglas,That is a good sounding tube in a SET amplifier. I have not heard a 45 SET that I did not like. But, I have only heard about a half dozen 45 SET amplifiers over the years.I hope you plan on running some efficient speakers, since it has about 1.5 watts of output power. That power level is more suited to 100db+ horns.Please let us know what circuit you come up with? And please share your outcome?Have fun!Norris Wilson

Subject: Re: Seduced by the Dark Side
Posted by PakProtector on Sun, 26 Mar 2006 11:30:46 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

hey-Hey!!!,The project is in the planning stages. The amp will be part of a tri-amp set up, so the low power is not such an issue. The system these will go in is owned by an artist...so appearance is impartant. Among the foolishness on the table now is an 866-rectified PS. Then there is the desire to do an all-DH amp. The bummer is I can't get past the idea of using a bigger power valve for a driver than the finals. The 10Y is a much more attractive valve than that ol' 45 anyway...:)cheers,Douglas