Any ideas for a $100 winter project?

I could use a good switchbox to put between my sources and amps.  I hate having to keep switching IC's all the time.

I'm going to be changing a 2-in 1-out switchbox I have to4-in, 1-out, and could send some pix once done (Sept-Oct).I will be using 3 high quality 4pdt switches. These costa fair bit less than a quality selector switch (Goldpoint wouldcost $107, the switches about $35). These are switching bothhots and grounds. I get mild nightmares thinking about theresemblance between a network of ground wires and a randomlydesigned antenna.I'll be out of touch until after Labor Day, so please don'tinterpret my lack of quick response as disinterest.Skip That's cool.  My tube amps don't have enough inputs, so a good switcher would be a big improvement.

My ALmarro A205 has only one input.  Sure would be nice to have a few more.  Can you post a pic or provide more details.....
