The Cornet inches closer to completion (if I had built it in it's metal box it would have been done long ago) and now I have an Advent 300 to listen to (not as good, prolly wants re-cap'd).Problem is, altho' it sounds great and has really nice parts (Vampire 808 RCA's, and Schurter IEC) that allow 2 inputs with a switch, it sure is ooooogly!Wadda you guys think? Should I take the time to box it, sell as is or keep it as a back-up?

Might make a difference for someone looking for a phono preamp on a budget!Just my 2 cents worth!I wonder if the Advent 300 would benefit with recapping!Ron
