dang... I really want to, but I really don't have anything to do with them, and I'd need a pair... and I'm in the middle of my 4 Pi's... crap. Have fun eating them up, they'll probably be gone tomorrow. There are a few other drivers there too

I called JBL. The new stuff went in and that post was up 15 - 30 minutes later. I was told they were not sold out and if there was a problem they would get back to me. They were there after the post went up. Try if you want them. As far as I know I got 2.

Otherwise, happy fathers day! Thanks for the tip, Robert. I tried to resist, and give someone else a shot at them. But I caved in after 12 hours. Maybe they are all gone, and I won't have to figure out how to explain to the wife that the other drivers were "too small" :) Sam

I ordered early on the 15th and got a confirmation report that they got the order. Does that mean I got a pair or might I get the dreaded phone call in the night? Is their computer programed to send you a note when the supply is gone? tdc

Well it was right I just got an Email from JBL. I am amazed how fast it sold out. I was told I was the first to call and they had just done the update not to worry we still have them???? Oh Well now I don't have to try to explain them what the hell I need another set of speakers for!

and got the "sold out" email by just after 1 pm...if you don't hear from them, I think you can assume they are ordered OK. The only time they have contacted me is when stuff is sold out; if the order goes thru OK, the stuff will just show up about a week later. That's when I fully believe the order was accepted, when the goods are in my hands! The form confirmation just means that they have your info, not that they still have the items. hey, if you are the rascal that "got" "MY" 2345 horns last time...grrrr...did you ever hook them up? It would not surprise me to find out they take the orders, throw them in a basket, and fill them at random till they run out of stuff, this whole deal feels too much like the lottery or epay at times. But JBL has the best deals ever :)

I ordered around 9:30 PST and have not checked the e-mail on that computer. Proably won't until Monday but I suspect that I didn't get them and will find an e-mail. I thought about ordering yesterday but was too tired and put it off. He who hesitates... Yes, I got the horns. Two weeks ago I bought the new JBL 2426H compression drivers and last week I started stringing resistors together in series -parallel or is it parallel- series, either way works for a 4 Pi. Maybe this week I will get it all running. I got delayed when I found the EV 12trxb speakers at Salvation Army and put those into living room condition. They are sooo sweet. Then I reworked an ESS Heil amt-la bookshelf. Also redid the x-over on a 1970 Hitachi JBL clone, a rare Bird called HS-500. SO I have been busy. Since I won't be doing the 2242 subs I will just have to finish the 4-pi. My family left for a one month tour of the Brazil Amazon rainforest areas so the neighbors are living in a state of acute decibel fear. They what happens to the sound levels when the homeroom monitors are gone. Stay tuned. tdc

The JBL "Tent Sale" URL is www.jblpro.com/Tent_Sale/sale_items.htm. But go to the parent address (www.jblpro.com) from time to time and look around, because this hasn't always been the same URL, if memory serves.

They came in 4.5 cuft vented enclosures. This matches the minimum recommended in the E.V. information sheet I got on this site. I changed the enclosure grilles to lose the broken wood lattice work and then sanded then down to new wood and went from fruitwood or dirty pecan to light oak. They look very nice in their new contemporary clothes. A larger enclosure, of maybe 5.5 cuft might be better but these have a very quick and clean bass as is. One inmate recommended 5 ft sealed and the t/s does suggest this. I tried sealed and the bass was tighter but midranges bloated. Not my cup of whatever. These speakers are like the Altec a-7 in that folks who are not into speakers hear them playing and comment on how natural the music sounds. tdc

I had to stop by the office and checked my e-mail. Yup, sold out notice. Ergo, JBL is playing straight with orders. Nuts! Anyway one 2242 is probably not that different from the dual 2226 setup in the 4648a system I did get. Its the old case of a larger cone versus dual smaller cones. Maybe we will have better luck next time. tdc
