Subject: Still trying to get organized and heard about this... (RSS aggregator)
Posted by lon on Fri, 26 Mar 2004 03:02:19 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I noticed that one of my other website stops is now on the Rich Site Summary feed (RSS) similar to something they have atYahoo. My reading on this started in Wired mag. and mostlyreferences blogs (such as wonkette.com, my second home). But Slyck.com also is identified as an RSS HML feed.Slyck provides information on the P2P community. I keepmost of these on the desktop and stop by them randomly. The software that connects to a Rich Site Summary showsrecent posts and updates from the sites subscribed. Itis called a news aggregator. I'm wondering if this is applicable to Audio Roundtable and the half dozen other audio and speakerbuilding sites I useeveryday... plus wonkette! of course. :-)

Subject: Forum Subscription
Posted by Wayne Parham on Fri, 26 Mar 2004 13:08:57 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

You can get an E-Mail any time a post is made on a forum by subscription. And you can subscribe to any forum by entering your E-Mail address on the subscribe.html page. So for example, if you wanted to subscribe to the General forum, go to www.AudioRoundTable.com/General/subscribe.html and enter your E-Mail address.

Subject: Re: Forum Subscription
Posted by lon on Fri, 26 Mar 2004 20:59:22 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

A little further research showed that an RSS aggregator isavailable for my Browser as a plug-in. I use Mozilla Firefox .08. All open source. Until or unless the RSS feed becomes available, I'll use the subscription option here. :-)