Subject: first post of 2003!
Posted by replay on Wed, 01 Jan 2003 02:00:16 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

happy new year! it's nice to post first, eastern standard time has the edge. all the best for 2003!cheers,georgeand i mean cheers, now! bottoms up!

Subject: Second to post....
Posted by Garland on Wed, 01 Jan 2003 10:39:47 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Party cancelled at last minute...Theater 4's crossover in pieces...too tired for TV...off to bed @10:00pm!...early to rise...Happy New Year to all!Garland

Subject: Who ho --- No. 3.  Best  wishes.
Posted by Rider on Wed, 01 Jan 2003 11:43:08 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hope this finds that every one made it through last night.Best wishes for the new year.  I resolve to spend less time and money on audio equipment than I did last year ;-).Grant.

Subject: New plans for the new year day...
Posted by Garland on Wed, 01 Jan 2003 11:55:30 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

We're off to the beach!... that is, Plum Island Nat. Wildlife Refuge in Newburyport, Ma. for a winter stroll and soaking up of the quiet sounds of surf and frozen sand! May peace reign supreme on this new world!G.

Subject: Re: first post of 2003!

Posted by Wayne Parham on Wed, 01 Jan 2003 18:05:57 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I hope everyone enjoyed the celebration!We went to a dance and acted like hooligans. That's what I always do, so New Years is no different. Then again, I don't drink so I guess I have no excuse. So much the better.But you know what? For years, I've wanted to celebrate New Year's Eve at a place with 1940's era music. Make it formal, and play songs from that era. Something like the old Glenn Miller orchestra. And all these years, no one in Tulsa has done it. It's always the same old bands at the same old clubs year round, doing the same old songs.There has to be events like that somewhere around the country, anyone attend one?

Subject: Re: New plans for the new year day...
Posted by DRC on Wed, 01 Jan 2003 19:00:16 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Great way to spend New Year's Day.Amen, brother! Keep your ears and your mind open.