Subject: MAC: MyAudioCables
Posted by Bob Brines on Wed, 30 Apr 2008 15:32:32 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Wayne,MyAudioCables is run by Steve Hallick. He has a line of mid-priced power cables, speaker cables and interconnects. I will have a selection of MAC cables available in my room for demonstration. Perhaps you might add his name to the demonstrator list. See his banner at http://www.myaudiocables.com/.Bob

Subject: Re: MAC: MyAudioCables
Posted by Wayne Parham on Thu, 01 May 2008 00:39:21 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Lookin' forward to seeing you with your speakers and those cool interconnects. But I gotta tell you that I'll be spending my evening packing, getting ready, etc. I don't think I'll have time to update the LSAF website. I'll bet somebody shoots some good photos of them at the show though.

Subject: Re: MAC: MyAudioCables
Posted by Shane on Thu, 01 May 2008 00:49:07 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Bob, I'll do what I can to take some decent pics of his wares so we can try to get the word out.

Subject: Re: MAC: MyAudioCables
Posted by Bob Brines on Thu, 01 May 2008 02:13:45 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

OK, thanks. This was kind of a late thought anyway. Steve bought a SECOND set of speakers from me and we go to talking cables. He sent me a set of speaker cables and a set of interconnects. I tested them and thought that they sounded pretty good. Then I forgot about them. As I was sorting through stuff to bring to LSAF, I ran across his cable and suggested that I could demo his stuff. So, he sent me some more cables. To me, the most interesting is the palladium interconnects. I won't get a chance to hear them until Friday, but I want to wring them out.Wayne,Understand. I spent all day today in the shop finishing up my latest spearks and tomorrow I spend all day bringing speakers up to the garage and bagging cables, connectors, who knows what. Maybe you can add Steve's banner after the show. LSAF does get a lot of play for a few weeks.Bob