I have two of these horns with DH1A drivers. I usedthem in my van in 1987, see pic. (today the van is history).My can was pretty medieval looking and the sound wasmenacing. Sounding like a concert on wheels, very clean sonicsand loud!<http://dreadlordpk.50megs.com/cgi-bin/i/hellvan/system-2.JPG>Last halloween, I took one horn/driver and placed it in thegarage and I broadcasted spooky sounds to scare the littleones trick or treating, people said they heard the screamsa few blocks away, more people came to my house to check itout.They are "fun" horns. heheIf you want to use there in your home, it would work greatif you had a large listening room, perhaps a listening roomthe size of a sports arena - hehe

60x40 constant directivity horns with a two inch throat. About 21"x13"x12". Provides loading down to 400 hz. Fairly uniform horizontal directivity from 500 hz up; vertical from 1200 up. See following:

I hate to think of them being all alone in the cold...Dan
