Subject: Heres an interesting little compression driver/horn combo
Posted by Adrian Mack on Thu, 06 Mar 2003 09:04:21 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

http://cgi.ebay.com.au/ws/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewItem&item=3010532690&category= Was browsing this auction, is a pair of real cheap compression drivers on very small 106mm by 60mm horns. 10 bucks! The compression driver brand is JPA, has 18mm throat and stated 800Hz-20KHz response. The auction says its used in Klipsch Heresy Horn speakers. Thought I might as well post this here, maybe get some more info on these if anyone can help, they are only 10 bucks so what the hell, I might as well buy them! Am not expecting anything great, thats what my JBL/P.Audio combo is for :) but they would be fun to muck around with. Anyone got any comments on these drivers?Thanks!Adrian

Subject: Re: Heres an interesting little compression driver/horn combo
Posted by Bubbawat on Thu, 06 Mar 2003 09:41:27 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Doesn't sound like a Heresy driver to me - while the drivers have changed over the years, the Klipsch heresy is a three way with the mid horn (squawker) generally crossed over at about 700hz going to a tweeter horn around 6k (maybe wrong here - 6k is probably the high side). That fuller range would only be on the Klipsch reference stuff.

Subject: Re: Heres an interesting little compression driver/horn combo
Posted by Adrian Mack on Fri, 07 Mar 2003 06:00:05 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Kewl, thanks for your help. Do you think they are worth getting at all, they arn't very expensive, or are they just crap stuff?

Subject: Re: Heres an interesting little compression driver/horn combo
Posted by Bubbawat on Fri, 07 Mar 2003 09:49:11 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Don't know at all - but $10 is a very cheap mistake if they aren't any good - go for it.