It's awesome when he comes, always bringing me sweet stuff... Here's my brand new, custom-built Ti Pro from TC Sounds... Quad stacked magnet (over the standard triple stacked), and a few other modifications I can't discuss... Very fun!!! Only one in existance that I know of. http://enclave.hypermart.net/bird/newtipro1.jpg http://enclave.hypermart.net/bird/newtipro2.jpg http://enclave.hypermart.net/bird/newtipro3.jpg Picture of removable/replacable cone/basket assembly (for quick changeouts at competitions). Since they are designed to do this anyway, I didn't think I would be revealing any company secrets by showing a picture of this, kept it on an obscure angle anyway... http://enclave.hypermart.net/bird/newtipro4.jpg The voice coil is the size of a can of clam chowder. except much thicker... pic of old one http://enclave.hypermart.net/bird/T... TiPro185.jpg Makes the old one look a little wimpy, eh? Adam

Cool! I've got my saw, solder, and glue ready. How about a bunch of guys building a speaker system that destroys a house, and then they ride off on choppers? I love it.Cheers,Steve Brutal!I had more of an image in my mind of making some really great looking custom installs. But crankin' bass horns will pull the drywall loose from the studs, exposing nail heads and chipping the paint. So I guess you could make some really great looking stuff and then tear the house down with it. Ha!

I'm afraid that $3000 dollar budget would go out the window in about two seconds for a high end stereo install... :DAdam

Well, There were a lot of excellent seminars at the 2003 Midwest Audiofest. But I think my favorite was the one done by Bill Epstein and Bill Martinelli. They gave some tips on woodworking, and it was just plain fun.Here is a post with some pics at MAF 2003. You were missed, and you'll have to try to make the next one.

I am sorry I couldn't make it... I would have loved to go. By this time next year, my life will be a lot different than it is now... Things will be much more flexible... And I will almost for sure be able to make it. :DAdam

Hypermart took the liberty of deleting my ftp site and everything on it after half a decade of constant use. Thanks a lot you fuckers at Hypermart!Adam
