Oh, wow, cool! George Augspurger is a smart guy and I expect a software product that implements his design ideas would be good.I did a quick search of Old Colony and found they also publish books from Bill Fitzmaurice and Charles Hansen, both of whom are very active in audio discussion groups and the DIY community in general. They've also distributed material from Bruce Rozenblit, Vance Dickson, Joseph D'Appolito, David Weems, Robert Bullock and Robert White, among others.So Old Colony seems like a pretty cool publisher.

Old Colony is the book publishing division of _aX_. AndI've subscribed to _audioXpress for 4 years or so. it is clebrating its 35 anniversary. So I have seen the Old Colony book list before. But in all these years I have not seen much about what might be a competitive program to the work of Martin King. Auspurger isreferred to in technical articles, but an implementation of adesign program, to my knowledge, was never written up in _aX_. I would have to check my old issues. _aX_ is now availableon cd rom for subscribers to the print version.   BTW Old Colony is also reprinting the complete monthlypublication called ... name escapes me.... in 2 volumes from the '70s. This magazine had all the breakthrough work for the emergingaudiophile community. Anyone can get the Old Colony cataloge from a request towww.custserve@audioXpress.com.
