Gang, I'm hear to tell you all that I have gone "bonkers" again and will be trying out the midhorn and Delta 10 driver in my fortress/museum of old and ancient audio gear.I called up Wayne the other day about speakers and stuff, the longer I talked, the more I wanted to buy. Long story short, I will be able to hear how this 300hz to 2khz horn system sounds.I know Bill Epsteins will look nicer(cuz he's Bill the woodworker), and sound nicer(he took the 2123 road). But I will have to work to get my close as can be for the poor man's version.Thanks Wayne, always a pleasure to discuss audio and life in general!!!Ron

I've been sick since the First of March.....what does it feel like to be healthy? I went to the Doc, I took my Zithromax like a good boy and Monday night I fell victim once again.I 've got drivers and veneer in boxes and the tablesaw by the door. The sun is shining and I'm working on another box of Kleenex.I did get rid of the shrillness on the horns, however. I had been running 6N1P's as drivers in the Ella for their greater detail but it was too much. Back to the 6922's and the tonal balance is much better. If I had some more sick time and was getting paid I'd order some JJ

6DJ8's which are supposed to be more western-European-like. Just got up from listening to 2 full versions of the Dvorak Symph 8. Superb recent recording with Tilson-Thomas and the LSO on their own label. Overall a fine reading but then hearing the Szell/Cleveland Sony SACD, well..... When you grow up hearing the Cleveland you just take for granted the incredible sonority achieved by every section while still hewing to a level of attention to detail that yields breath-taking ensemble playing. The violins open the second movement Adagio with a gorgeous theme that is just Romantic enough to let the strings vibrate and glisten. BTW, a certain other Woodworker named Bill, one who actually makes things, has been sending me fotos of the more and more outrageously creative works he's doing. I'm happy to get the grain of the veneer all running the same way.....

I was playing with melamine paint over the winter for my router table and its cool stuff. Available at HD, can be tinted to any colour, and dries to a vinyl-like coating. A good way to finish MDF if you don't want to veneer. Stays tacky for two days and requires four days of drying for a hard smooth finish. On the other hand, I just received over 100 sq ft of veneer for $6 on eBay. I'll be spending the weekend veneering anything and everything I can get my hands on.gar.

The wrong 6dj8/6922 family tube can sound very shrill. Went through that with my counterpoint pre amp. If you stumble on one, try a mullard "shield" 6922. expensive, (I've paid from 40 to 90 dollars apiece) but so warm and nice its really an amazing tube. Gold pins and supposed to last 10,000 hours. circa 1958. These will make the modern 6922 sound sick in comparison. My 2 cents.Russellc

Both tested well but became noisy with use, $25 and $40/pair respectively. You're right they sounded smooth and spacious. Have to try the JJ's. If they don't have some of that magic I'll just have to buy more bologna and go back to Andy Bouwman.

Gar, Thanks for the tip. But if ask Bill Epstein about my abilities with wood and stain and all that good stuff, he can explain to you why he will do it for me. I am speaker nut, but I "bastardize" or use others cabinets. My thing is driver/crossover implementation that I have more skill(luck) at.Bill, Hurry up and get healthy, I have work for you to do!!!!!!!Ron
