

---

Subject: Speakers for my father in-law

Posted by Erik from Holland on Wed, 28 Dec 2005 18:20:53 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Hi Wayne, It has been a while since i was on your forum, but i need your advice. I'm now 10 years busy with loudspeakers, and in particular prof. audio cause of my drive in show. (you can see it at www.happystation.nl) Know in prof. audio i used proofed designs, and components for the kabinets. And your always capable on "steering" the sound in the right direction by using your 31 band Eq and Active crossover. But, i still want to build me a set of home speakers, but i did`nt dare to do it, because it has to come together wel. And i think i don`t have enough knowledge to calculate and design on my own. Now i want to build a set of audiophile speakers for my family in law. They don`t have much budget for it and they would`nt like large kabinets. Still i`d like to build them a set of sparkling, open and on the other hand enough low-end loudspeakers. What would you recoment? question B is: would it be posible for you to send me kit without the drivers? since i live in the netherlands, i think it would be to much delivering and customs costs to order the entire kit with heavy speakers in it. Best regards, Erik

---

Subject: Re: Speakers for my father in-law

Posted by Wayne Parham on Thu, 29 Dec 2005 01:16:26 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

There are lots of good choices. It really depends on your budget, size and placement options. Might be best to check the website and look through the forum archives to get a feel for what's available.

---

Subject: Re: Speakers for my father in-law

Posted by roland on Fri, 30 Dec 2005 09:08:56 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Hi there, in fact I ordered the pi stage4 kit from Wayne, living in Luxembourg. The cost ends up being about the same (including import taxes) as buying the parts here.... The Euro is strong and Wayne has great prices. and there is the convinience factor of just receiving all the parts in one go.... and Wayne is a great guy - why not support him. Just my 25p. Roland

---

Subject: Re: Speakers for my father in-law

Posted by Matts on Fri, 30 Dec 2005 13:35:11 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

also, cabs would still be heavy, much larger box, and more expensive to ship. Most carriers have a large surcharge if the dimensions of a package exceed a certain number, which most cabs would. If you buy the wood locally (closer to Baltic ply that we in USA are), and build the cabs yourself, or pay a local carpenter/cabinet maker to do it, and buy the parts kit from Wayne these speakers are quite a bargain besides sounding great.

---