No, it was a problem with the service provider. PiSpeakers.com is hosted by a company that is owned by a buddy of mine. She also does BillFitzmaurice.com and she's a good person but I think maybe she became overwhelmed. Sometimes stuff falls through the cracks with her. I've moved other sites off her servers because she couldn't keep up. But I try to leave some business on her systems because she's a pretty good gal. Not the best business sense, I know. But if it ever becomes a real issue, I'll deal with it then.
