I was reading on another forum where someone was praising Dayton Waveguides sold by PartsExpress. These are plastic horns designed for 1" compression drivers. The 10" model goes down to 1600hz which may be good for many Pi speakers. Any one here have any experience with these for home audio?G.

No experiance with thes models, but wave guides I've seen in the past can have a beaming affect. very nice for a single listening spot. not as nice for wider dispersion which I believe helps the entire soundstage of the system.
