Subject: wirewound resistors
Posted by j.luis cruz . on Fri, 11 Aug 2006 23:12:38 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hy Wayne .could answer me this questions . does have the wirewound resistors all welded connstruction as its counterpart non-inductive resistors , what % of precicion does have the wirewound resistors and last make a big diferent sound the non-inductive resistors versus the wirewound .Unfortunately I only get here the wirewound version as semper thanks Wayne

Subject: Re: wirewound resistors
Posted by Wayne Parham on Sat, 12 Aug 2006 04:07:18 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Most people prefer non-inductive resistors for audio. In the tweeter circuit, it's a pretty good idea to stay with non-inductive resistors but you can probably get away with wire-wound parts for Zobels on your woofers and mids.